As we count our blessings on this Thanksgiving season, we consider ourselves to be extremely lucky to have associates like you. May we continue to have a flourishing and mutually beneficial relationship. Wishing you a happy Thanksgiving from DNP, Inc.
The Ninth National Doctors of Nursing Practice Conference: Baltimore
DNP Conference Baltimore cont’d
The 9th National DNP Conference is now behind us and plans are being made for the 2017 event to take place in New Orleans. The 2016 conference planning team is helping to assure the new conference planning team has the tools and support to make next year’s conference a solid and well structured event. If the energy and interest noted in Baltimore is any indication of future success, we are sure to celebrate the contributions of professional colleagues.

Other initiatives are in the pipeline for completion and further development, including enduring continuing education offerings, expansion of OUTCOMES monthly e-newsletter, and growth in the strategic plan for the Foundation. All of these efforts are moving forward in small measured steps. Stay tuned for more updates, as these programs become a reality.

Should DNP be required for Nurse Executives?
There is currently a large debate on the education level required for nursing executives. http://doctorsofnursingpractice.ning.com/forum/topics/should-dnp-be-required-for-nurse-executives

October 2016 Survey Results: The DNP Prepared Nurse in Academia

The October 2016 survey questions were directed at capturing information about how the DNP prepared nurse is working in the world of academia. We hope that you find the results interesting.

61% of respondents either agreed that tenure was a goal or aspiration in their career trajectory. 39% relayed that this was either somewhat of a goal or not a goal at all.

59% of respondents relayed that tenure for the DNP prepared professional was offered in their university or school of nursing.

22% relayed that they were overlooked for advancement in favor of a colleague that had a degree other than a DNP.

43% relayed that their organization demonstrated an appreciation for the DNP prepared professional.

Surprisingly, 80% of respondents relayed that if they had the opportunity to earn a different terminal degree other than a DNP, they would.

These findings dissatisfaction with the DNP degree in academia, yet also points to a higher number of universities that offer tenure to the DNP prepared professional.

What do you think? Are these findings reflective of your experiences?

Shaping Care Through Innovative and Expert Nursing Leadership

American Organization of Nurse Executives
www.aone.org
Part of the impetus for the early development of the Doctor of Nursing (DNP) practice programs was the need to prepare nurse practitioners (NPs) for a different level of practice than had been the norm of master’s programs. Two nursing programs with robust faculty practice programs had concluded in the late 1990s that changes in the complexity of patients treated by NPs had substantially increased over the years. This was combined with new requirements that NPs serve as case managers across settings for their new, sicker patients.

In 2007 The American Board of Comprehensive Care was created to certify DNP-NP graduates for practice at a level not tested by the existing certification programs. This new certification is the Diplomate in Comprehensive Care (DCC). The DCC program was nationally accredited by the Institute for Credentialing Excellence, the same organization that accredits other NP certifications. About 100 DCCs have been certified.

In the past two years, changes in the organizational support for the American Board of Comprehensive Care has changed and a new organizational structure has become necessary. These changes have resulted in the certification examination not being administered while the new structures are being put into place. The goal now is to prepare for a new administration in 2017. We believe that this certification is even more critical as our patients and the systems of care become more complex.

It was great to connect with the AONE organization and Alyse Kittner, the Director of Membership at the exhibit booth offered at this year’s event in Baltimore. Through her efforts we were able to learn about the ways AONE membership supports nurse leaders in DNP programs and DNP faculty members.

A few speakers at the conference referenced the Competencies and Guiding Principles of AONE. Take a look at these and other resources to learn more about this membership-driven organization.

All of the information about joining AONE is on this website.

AONE membership is for nurse leaders across all settings. If you would like to discuss membership options for your or your team, please contact Alyse Kittner. She is happy to set-up a call with you.

Being a Volunteer at the 9th National DNP Conference

On October 5-7, 2016, I had the privilege and honor to join over 370 of my nursing colleagues at the Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) conference in Baltimore, MD. Sixteen DNP students were selected as volunteers out of a pool of 75 applicants.

The theme of the conference was "Transforming Healthcare Through Collaboration." It was a three-day conference where we came together to celebrate successful methods of collaboration to improve healthcare outcomes, address health disparities and explore future opportunities and challenges. The panel discussion titled "Nursing Organization Collaboration with DNP Prepared Nurses: How to Move the Profession Forward and Assist DNP's with Advocacy" left a lasting impression on me. The five professionals seated at the table collectively shared resources and tools DNP professionals need to move forward.

These tools and themes included: Leadership, Collaboration, Communication, Organizational behavior, Scholarship and Advocacy.

Overall, the conference motivated me to continue on this DNP journey with a fervent spirit.
